Dear George and April,

Thanks for the email below. I'll save discussion on the substance for our meet and confer, which we must insist we schedule for early next week. April, I know you will be on a well-deserved vacation and I see no need to interrupt that given Mr. Colborn is represented by a team of three lawyers from three different law firms. George's office was involved in the "designation" of the Manitowoc Documents and in Paragraph 6 of the attached you identified George as "lead counsel for the Plaintiff" and indicated that he was the ultimate decider on Plaintiff's side of this case when it comes to discovery disputes. George, please let us know your availability Monday and Tuesday for a call.

In addition to discussing the Manitowoc Documents, we are very concerned by the over-designation of emails and text messages, the assertion of various privileges that obviously do not apply (including the attorney-client privilege, spousal privilege, journalist's privilege and possibly the priest-parishioner privilege), and Plaintiff's failure to comply with the ESI Protocol (for example, by not using Bates numbers). While we will leave it to the Producer Defendants to address Plaintiff's failure to produce documents responsive to the Producer Defendants' discovery requests, we would like to discuss the problems with what Plaintiff has produced in our meet and confer next week. George's office produced the documents at issue and again, given his role as lead counsel and his many years of experience as a litigator, we assume he is more than capable of handling the meet and confer in your absence, April.

Of course, if the discovery deadlines didn't create some urgency, we would be happy to wait. But depositions must be concluded by May 20. Even if discovery motions could all be miraculously filed by Monday, they would not be fully briefed until May 2. And then the judge will need to decide them and, after decision, additional documents will likely need to be produced. So time is of the essence. Meanwhile, we are beginning to prepare witnesses and may need to show and discuss with them the over-designated documents Mr. Colborn has produced, so if we can reach some agreement on the designations, privileges, and production format during a meet and confer, that will be most helpful.

Finally, I want to be very clear that—as I have said before—we are not treating the so-called "privileged" documents as privileged. They are not privileged and your unilateral attempt to label them as such does not make them privileged. If you think they are privileged, then you should have taken immediate steps to claw them back, as we told you more than three weeks ago on March 4. You took no such steps. You did not even respond to our letter until today.

Please do not accept our silence on the substance of your email as indicating agreement with anything you say. We look forward to chatting at George's earliest convenience.

Leita

△ EXTERNAL

Leita,

This message responds to your letter of March 4.

With respect to your assertions regarding attorney-client privilege, as your local counsel well knows, Wisconsin law is that a government employee's occasional personal use of government email does not make the messages therein "public records." Schill v. Wisconsin Rapids School Dist., 2010 WI 86, ¶23. Rather, personal contents of the "e-mails are not subject to release to a record requester merely because they are sent or received using the government employers' e-mail systems and then stored and maintained on those systems." Id. Further, the fact that the County produced them could not waive Mr. Colborn's attorney-client privilege claims, as those can be waived only by a client, under well-established law.

For the same reasons, the fact that we were distracted initially with technical issues relating to the production (and which were of your firm's admitted making), followed by a significant rush to designate these thousands of documents in accordance with your deadlines, could not waive Mr. Colborn's privilege claims. Even an attorney cannot waive a client's privilege claims without the client's consent.

We obviously expect that you consider our designations notice that we contend that these documents are privileged. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(5)(B), a party who is notified that material produced in discovery is privileged should "promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has; must not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved; [and] must take reasonable steps to retrieve the information if the party disclosed it before being notified. . . ."

With respect to the "attorneys' eyes only" designations, I specifically advised that these designations were made because we were advised by the third-party ESI service that we used that they could not remove personal identifying information, such as phone numbers and email addresses. I also advised that we would prepare in-house versions of the same documents that omitted these and that therefore could be merely designated as "confidential," rather than "attorneys' eyes only." We intend to provide these versions in advance of any scheduled depositions.

In the interim, it is more than reasonable for us to honor Mr. Colborn's attempt to protect himself and his friends, acquaintances and family members from the obvious potential for further intrusion into his private life and the lives and those of his friends and family members that would result if your clients personally obtain, and eventually release into the public domain, the private email addresses, physical addresses, and telephone numbers of Mr. Colborn and those close to him. As the numerous threats leveled at Mr. Colborn due to MAM demonstrate, the legitimate concerns transcend even privacy and rise to the level of safety concerns. Recent discovery requests provide further reason to be concerned that your clients are on a quest to promote their "storyline" lionizing Steven Avery and villainizing Mr. Colborn, and we do not want Mr. Colborn's personal address book made available as a playbook for "Making a Murderer 3."

Finally, I note that to my recollection, you have only produced a handful of documents that were not subject to confidentiality designations, and those few consisted almost entirely, if not entirely, of public trademark filings. When I previously asked you to reconsider your confidentiality designations for email messages sent between Netflix representatives relating to the MAM production, you offered no purported justification for the designations, indicating only that you were not willing to consider removing them except on a case-by-case basis, so that we would ostensibly have to debate with you the merits of each individual document among thousands in your production.

In light of the above, I agree that a meet-and-confer would be appropriate after I return from a planned family vacation next week (and which I mentioned earlier in the context of deposition scheduling when we were looking at March/April deposition dates, prior to the stipulation to extend the deposition deadline).

FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN

ANDREW L. COLBORN,
Plaintiff

NETFLIX, INC.,
CHROME MEDIA, LLC, f/k/a
SYNTHESIS FILMS, LLC,
LAURA RICCIARDI, and MOIRA DEMOS,

Case No. 19-CV-484

Defendants.

SUPPLEMENTAL DECLARATION OF APRIL ROCKSTEAD BARKER

I, April Rockstead Barker, declare under penalty of perjury as follows:

1. I am one of the attorneys for the Plaintiff in the above-captioned action
2. Attached as Exhibit 1 is a true and correct copy of an email message that I sent to counsel for the Defendants, including Leita Walker, counsel for Netflix, Inc., on July 28, 2021. To my knowledge, I never received a response specific to my request for production of non-confidential documents.
3. Attached as Exhibit 2 is a true and correct copy of an email message that I sent to Leita Walker on June 24, 2021. In early July through mid-July of this year, I was also in communications with Defendants' counsel regarding a supplemental joint discovery report that Defendants proposed.
4. Attached as Exhibit 3 are true and correct copies of portions of a document that was contained in the first document production by Netflix, Inc., on or about September 17, 2021.

5. Attached as group Exhibit 4 is a true and correct copy of an email exchange that I had with Leita Walker in response to her October 7, 2021, correspondence.
6. During the September 16, 2021 meet-and-confer with Defendants' counsel, I did not indicate or manifest acceptance of the terms or timing of production that Netflix unilaterally informed me it would be following. Rather, I stated at the outset of the call that I thought that we were unfortunately unlikely to make any progress unless Defendants indicated that they would be providing documents within a week or so. After Ms. Walker described Netflix's timetable for production, I indicated to counsel on the call that I would have to talk to Attorney Burnett, lead counsel for the Plaintiff, to determine whether he would accept their proposal in resolution of the discovery dispute. Attorney Walker demonstrated understanding of this, stating something to the effect of, "You talk to George." Attorney Burnett did not find Netflix's proposed timetable agreeable. Further discussions would have been futile after that point.
7. Attorney Walker's statement that she "offered to provide an extension" to Plaintiff to respond to the discovery responses served by Netflix, Inc. on Plaintiff is not true to the extent that she may be contending that she offered an unconditional extension to me that was there for the asking. During the September 16, 2021 call, I asked Ms. Walker if she would extend the deadline for the responses given that Netflix had yet to produce the documents that Plaintiff requested in June. Ms. Walker responded that she would consider (emphasizing that word) providing an extension if we provided specific reasons for an extension. Otherwise, she firmly indicated that Netflix would expect timely written responses to its discovery. To my recollection and understanding, she disagreed with my suggestion that the timing of Netflix's production alone would be a justifiable reason for an extension of our deadline to respond to Netflix's discovery.

Dated this 29th day of October, 2021.

Leita, Kevin, and James,

Based on the Court's comments today, it appears that something more substantive will have to be submitted before the judge will agree to enter the protective order. I assume that you are likely preparing something for the Court in that regard.

In the meantime, in the interests of avoiding further delay, we would like to move forward with respect to responsive discovery materials that would not be designated as confidential under a protective order when entered. Please confirm that the materials that are not claimed to be confidential can be forwarded while we sort out the protective order issues.

Thanks very much,
April

Leita,

Normally, I would have sent them by e-mail as well, but I've been inundated with matters that have waited while I was out of the office for essentially three weeks through my mother's hospitalization, transfer to hospice, and passing. In addition, I have co-workers here asking me to help them with urgent matters with deadline. And I am still dealing with issues that need to be addressed for my mother's final affairs. I have very little staff help available to me, as well, pandemic or no, unfortunately. So I can assure you that this was simply a matter that I literally had to get those in envelopes in the mail on the way out the door and had no opportunity to go down to the one scanner I can use on the lower level before I had to get to another obligation that day, then had to assist with an urgent briefing deadline all day the following day and have been preparing for an oral argument out of town yesterday since then.

Certainly, no offense was intended by sending them via mail. In calmer times, I will of course endeavor to send documents via email as well.

Hi, April, I believe you mailed the Third Set of Discovery Requests in the Colborn matter on June 16 but I just received them today. Our office is still operating under pandemic protocols which means we have a skeleton staff on site and receipt of mail sent the old-fashioned way is often delayed. If it's not too much trouble to send by email as well, I would appreciate it. We are happy to extend the same courtesy to you, of course.

Thanks—

Leita,

I cannot respond to your entire correspondence immediately, but suffice it to say that I disagree with virtually all of it, including the way you characterized our conversation on September 16.

However, to clarify as an initial matter, your discovery requests were only validly served on us by mail, because we had not consented to service by email (as you acknowledged in your recent message).

Therefore, three days are added to the response period under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 6. Accordingly, the responses are timely.
